

Jim Hodgson

Short Bio

April 2018

Jim Hodgson, executive director of the Fort Worth Aviation Museum, is from Chicago and graduated in 1971 from the University of Illinois as an industrial engineer. He earned his naval aviator wings with the U.S. Marine Corps in 1972 and a master's degree in management in 1976. He became a pilot for Continental Airlines in 1978 and retired in 2013 with more than 28,000 flight hours. In 1997, he helped found the OV-10 Bronco Association as a nonprofit corporation that operates the Fort Worth Aviation Museum. He is currently one of the Texas WWI Centennial Commemoration Directors.